The Travel Letter for Germany, Austria, Switzerland & the New Europe

20 YEARS OF GEMÜTLICHKEIT

Looking Back 20

20 Years Ago Welcome to the premiere issue of Gemütlichkeit

The word gemütlichkeit has no direct English equivalent, but translates roughly as hospitality, a sense of warmth, amity and ambience. Part of gemütlichkeit is the place one is, part is the people one is with. It is a German word describing those qualities. That's why gemütlichkeit is fitting as the name of a newsletter for travel to Germany, Austria and Switzerland. It's what those three countries have: good people in a beautiful place that combine to make one feel supremely welcome and eminently comfortable...

Excursions into the European Heartland

Surely the greatest of the considerable pleasures of automobile travel in Germany, Austria and Switzerland lies in exploring the maze of backroads which overlays the countryside like a vast network of fine capillaries.

While Autobahn routes no doubt provide the quickest highway transportation in the world, they need only be used when time is important above all other considerations. With sleek German motorcars whistling down the fast lane at speeds up to 220 kilometers per hour (137 mph) one hesi-

"Bester Out in Big Warrior Shakeup" read the four-column headline on the sports page of the San Francisco Examiner of May 8, 1984. A bad team had had a bad year and heads had to roll. As it turned out only one head rolled, mine. I had been fired from my job as vice president and director of player personnel for the Golden State Warriors of the National Basketball Association.

Though I didn't know it at the time, it was a lucky break that steered me on a path that led to the birth of Gemütlichkeit, a newsletter about travel in Germany, Austria and Switzerland; first issue published January 1987. After a few years, what began as a bit of a lark and a sideline to "real" work, became a principal occupation.

Since I wasn't a professional "travel writer," and knew nothing of the publishing business, perhaps it

Munich's Asam Hotel

I have been a Gemütlichkeit subscriber since its premiere issue. Sometime during the 1990s, my wife and I wanted to visit an exchange student who had stayed with us and was now living in Munich. The day we left I grabbed the latest issue of Gemütlichkeit to read on the plane. Coincidentally, it contained an article on Munich.

Instead of taking a local's recommendation to stay at Munich's Platzl Hotel we decided to take Gemütlichkeit's advice and stay at the Asam Hotel. It turned out to be one of the most memorable experiences of our trip.

At check-in, I mentioned Gemütlichkeit to the desk personnel. They didn't seem to know anything about it, but were genuinely excited about the article.

Service had been great up to that point, but then the hotel really rolled out the red carpet. Our rooms were upgraded to suites, we received complimentary wine and took me a couple of years to take what we were doing seriously. That changed when people started writing to tell us how their European trips were better for having followed the advice they read in Gemütlichkeit. Frankly, for someone who for eight years been had part of an organization that did nothing but lose, it was a welcome boost in self-esteem.

Now, 20 years later, I know our recommendations are solid and our advice is sound. In fact, when I see the fluff and misinformation in slick travel magazines, I realize we are unique when it comes to advising on independent travel in Europe.

When I look back at our own travel experiences in connection with Gemütlichkeit, there are many indelible memories. Surely the dumbest thing we ever did was to check luggage on a Swiss train from St. Gallen to Prague. Besides the approximately $25 cost for two bags, our gear didn't get to Prague until four days after we did, the day of our departure. We learned the hard way that checked luggage in Europe seldom rides the same train and usually doesn't arrive the same day.

As you can imagine, we've ridden dozens, probably hundreds, of cable cars, lifts, and funiculars to virtually all the high places and mountain tops in our three countries. Easily the scariest, however, is the flimsy two-person cable car that swings in the breeze over craggy cliffs on its way up to the Hotel Forsthaus Grasek above Garmisch-Partenkirchen. The most thrilling was the 20-minute glass-bubble helicopter that started in a meadow at Château-d'Oex, then skimmed jagged peak after jagged peak in an ascent that finally deposited us at about 11,000 feet on Les Diablerets Glacier. From there a snow-cat took us to a mountain hut where we lunched on air-dried meat, cheese and Yvorne, a lovely white wine, though deadly when consumed at altitude. After that came the incredibly steep, three-stage cable car ride down. As we said in the January '89 issue, the wine so fortified us that "had we been required to rappel the 11,000 feet bare-handed on dental floss, it wouldn't have fazed us." By comparison, the next day's hot-air balloon ride over the Ormonts Valley was tame.

The aforementioned Forsthaus Grasek, which has, sad to say, fallen on hard times, is the setting for another vivid recollection. In those bygone days, though the owner was a gemütlich sort, she left management to a steely "Nurse Ratchet" type who ruled with a stern visage. One evening we took the cable car to the valley floor to partake in the nightly revels at the great Gasthof Fraundorfer. Rather more beer was consumed than was needed for hydration purposes and suddenly it was 1am; both the cable car and the hotel were shut for the night—and we had forgotten to bring our room key, something we had been cautioned to do if we planned to be out past 11pm. Somehow a flashlight materialized and we located the very steep and winding path up the mountain. It was summer, the weather was warm, and up the hill we went, giggling and stumbling, sometimes to all fours. As the Forsthaus hove into double vision sometime around 2am, we noted through the glass front door the figure of a woman in a chair. "Fraulein Ratchet's" iron-gray hair, normally coiffed in a tight bun, hung to her shoulders. She wore a night gown and a tight-lipped expression that to this day fills me with dread. She opened the door, let us in, locked it behind us and disappeared into the gloom without a word. Even on subsequent visits, she never smiled—at least at us.

Someone recently asked me if there would be another 20 years of Gemütlichkeit. I hope so and I think so, but the most definitive statement I can make on that subject is one that harkens back to my days in the sports business: we're gonna take it one year at a time.—RHB tates to call Autobahn driving boring, but there is a more satisfying, albeit slower, way of proceeding: the "Yellow Roads."

Gasthof Fraundorfer, January 1987

...Perhaps it's just the beer, but something happens right around 10 o'clock that transforms all that. It is similar to the moment in "The Wizard of Oz" when the movie changes from black & white to color. One is drinking the same beer, in the same place, served by the same waitress—but somehow all is different...

...Sometimes, after midnight, Herr Fraundorfer, a huge, curly-haired man with bright red cheeks and wearing lederhosen made with enough leather to saddle a division of cavalry, will buy the house a round or two of schnapps. He may visit your table and, with a salute, knock one back with you...

Budapest's Hotel Hungaria, January 1987

Each morning, the huge breakfast room was filled with an assortment of chain smoking East Europeans, mostly men. The long buffet tables displayed an array of heavy, listless food: decent coffee, no fresh juice, thickly-sliced meats and cheeses, good butter, leaden sweet rolls, and large vats of some sort of hash which none of us had the courage to try.

15 Years Ago*Dear Subscriber, January 1991

Whatever happens in the Persian Gulf in the months ahead, it seems that the word "terrorism" is one we will be seeing and hearing with great frequency. We may have to begin to regard travel to Europe the way we do other dangers in our lives. Live with them. Possibly you are concerned and cautious about some of the things that kill Americans every hour of every day — things like alcohol, butter, red meat and driving an automobile. But if you're like me you haven't given them up. Red meat once or twice a week. Olive oil instead of butter. Swissair to Zürich instead of Pan Am to Frankfurt. Caution, not abstention.

By the way, wouldn't it be wonderful if a televised news conference by the Surgeon General could have as much effect on smokers as a few Rand Corporation terrorism experts speaking on CNN have had on airline bookings to Europe? Cigarette companies, like airlines, would be going out of business. Also, think for a moment about all the smokers who are canceling plans to travel to Europe fearing they may die at the hand of a terrorist.

How to keep your car (and you) in one piece on the highways of Europe, April 1991

Though you won't get a ticket on the German autobahn for speeding (unless there is a posted speed limit) you can for other violations. On lesser highways, particularly in the countryside, there are radar speed traps. You pay on the spot. We were stopped by hidden radar outside a tiny village a few years ago and escorted to a police van containing several beer-sipping polizei. They spoke little English but the atmosphere was relaxed and friendly, particularly when they saw our U.S. passports. We had a jovial conversation about American film stars and musicians and for a time I thought we would get off. But after a few minutes came a big smile and a big bill, about 100 DM if memory serves.

Commentary, December 1991

Gemütlichkeit is calling a favorite little hotel for a one-night reservation and being told it is closed for the night, the owners will be out for dinner and won't return until midnight, but they will leave a key under the front door mat. That happened in 1986, a year before this newsletter was born, at the Hotel Dreieich in Langen, near the Frankfurt Airport.

Gemütlichkeit is Herr Steinke himself waiting for you at information counter #14 in the Frankfurt Airport. You've just cleared customs, dead tired from a long flight, and anxious to flee the airport crush. Outside at the curb is your current model, spotlessly clean, Steinke Autos in Europe rental car. Herr Steinke helps load the luggage, shakes your hand and sends you down the road.

Gemütlichkeit is never having to go through that obnoxious business of: "If you'd like to run a tab, sir, we'll need a major credit card."

Gemütlichkeit is the beverage refrigerator in the Hotel Petrisberg in Trier. It's open 24 hours. Guests help themselves and at check out time tell the owner what they had.

Gemütlichkeit is coming down for breakfast on your first morning at the Hotel Anker in Marktheidenfeld (Germany), silently wondering where the breakfast room is. The owner reads your mind, and, in a way that makes you think she's been looking forward to this all morning, personally escorts you into the room and seats you at a table. And no, she didn't know we published a travel newsletter.

10 Years Ago*Reader's Forum, March 1996

...When reading last month's article on Hamburg restaurants, I was partly amused and partly surprised at the writer's review of Peter Lembcke restaurant. Amused, because any German, Parisian, Swede and other Northern European who knows typical American travelers, could have predicted the scene at Peter Lembcke's. Surprised, because it still remains a riddle to Northern Europeans - as well as fashionable Romans - why Americans traveling in Europe have not caught on with dress code, local customs, distinction between tourist spots and non-tourist spots, as well as overall etiquette.

First of all, elegant Peter Lembcke is not a typical tourist spot and, thus, does require —if only in unwritten terms because of today's "political correctness" rules—that customers do wear elegant clothes and not typical American tourist attire; in other words, no windbreakers, no hiking shoes, no open-neck shirts for men, and certainly no rucksacks!

Secondly, the customers should have common sense and notice at entering a restaurant whether he or she 'fits in' given the atmosphere of the place. Americans, for some unknown reason, seem to be oblivious to this and, thus, ask for it when treated shabbily...

We received several responses to the foregoing letter but perhaps the most notable came from the late R.W. "Johnny" Apple, then the Washington bureau chief for the New York Times and a Gemütlichkeit subscriber. Here's an excerpt.

...Mrs. Wildman strikes me as very ill-informed about German gastronomy and the attitudes of people in Northern Germany in general. Lembcke is not a good restaurant by anyone's standards. All of my friends in Hamburg — a sophisticated bunch, including the publisher of Die Zeit — have warned me against it. When I disregarded their comments a year or so ago, I found them to be right. The food is adequate enough, but certainly nothing special, nothing inventive and nothing to seek out. The room is gloomy and a bit shabby. It cannot stand comparison with the dining room at the Hotel Prem, a small gem on the Alster, or the Landhaus Scherrer, which is precisely the kind of sophisticated place that Mrs. Wildman seems (incorrectly) to think that Lembcke is...

...First, and most important: right now, this year, is the time to get across the Atlantic. Someday—and I have a feeling it will be sooner rather than later—we will look back on this summer as the good ol' days when things were dirt cheap for Americans in our part of Europe.

Prices are almost too good to be true, especially in Germany and Austria. For example: Here in Ashland, a pair of top-of-the-line, French-made Mephisto, Gore-Tex walking shoes cost $255. In Vienna the same shoe sells for AS 2490 ($155). An order of Garnelenspiesse (grilled shrimp), absolutely fresh, with salad and a plate of the world's tastiest fried potatoes with Speck (ham/bacon) at Berlin's fabulous Rogacki market (which so far only Gemütlichkeit readers know about) is DM17.85 ($8.11). Of course, that's enough for two persons and they will happily divide the order. Huge glasses of a sprightly Bordeaux white wine, a perfect accompaniment, are DM3.95 ($1.80). A candlelit, three-course dinner for two in the rustically elegant dining room of the Hotel Neu-Meran near Bad Reichenhall is about DM 82 ($37), not including beverages. Double rooms in comfortable three-star hotels in major cities can be found at from $85-$125; substantially less in the countryside.

Dear Subscriber, November 2001

A phrase we hear a lot, and one that keeps trying to work its way from my brain on to the page, is "at times like these." It doesn't work, though, because we've never had times like these: hijacked jetliners flown deliberately into famous buildings, a nation fearful of opening its mail or breathing the air of its work spaces, and the skies over our cities patrolled by war planes...

...People are afraid. Real estate sellers in our small, southern Oregon town tell us there is a new motivation behind the rush of buyers coming here from California—fear of terrorist attacks.

Yes, this is uncharted territory, a place we've never been before, and it's understandable that overseas travel has lost some of its appeal. Overseas, in large part, means Europe. Half the 24 million Americans who vacationed abroad last year went to the Continent. We spent $65 billion there and traveled more in Europe than the Germans, who, it should be noted, were already there.

...since September 11 not a single subscriber has asked us to stop sending Gemütlichkeit...

Anniversary in the Dolomites

In March of 1988 I received a simple letter inviting me to subscribe to a travel letter for Germany, Austria and Switzerland. There were no glossy pictures, no gimmicks and no prizes, just a straightforward invitation. I took a chance and sent a check. My first issue, dated April 1988, began the most wonderful and valuable subscription relationship I have ever experienced; one that has lasted to this day. (We saved every issue since that first one and have just started filling our fourth binder.)

If I had to choose any one article out of the hundreds that have had an impact on our travels I would have to choose the "Yellow Roads" article of June 1988, which describes a drive through the spectacular Dolomites. I remember reading the article aloud to my husband and he said, "When are we going?" We were intrigued by the descriptions of a different sort of mountain scenery.

We took several trips to Europe in the ensuing years but never quite made it to the Dolomites until 1997. We were planning a month in Europe to celebrate our 35th wedding anniversary and my impending retirement. Once again, I turned to my Gemütlichkeit binders for inspiration and came across that old article on the Dolomites and a later issue in November of the same year that reviewed the Hotel Cappella. Thus our anniversary was spent at the Hotel Cappella. It was the most magical and memorable celebration ever.

As our 45th anniversary approaches next year, we are again perusing our issues of Gemütlichkeit, confident that, although we will probably never experience anything quite as wonderful as our 35th, you will lead us to yet another great European adventure.

20 Years of Europe Travel

Gemütlichkeit newsletter has been a mainstay of our travel planning since 1987. We started our travels to Germany in 1979 as a young, nearly-newlywed couple, discovering the Christmas markets in Nürnberg and Munich, using Gourmet magazine as our guide. But with the passing of the venerable Lillian Langseth Christensen, your newsletter came to the fore. From hotel listings in the 1980s in Salzburg such as the Wolf to what became our best luxury-at-a-reasonable-price hotel in Munich, the Hotel Exquisit, you became our trusted source. You inspired us to bring our one-and-a-half-year-old along, and in every successive year to his mid-teens, from Appenzell to Vienna, Rothenburg to Salzburg, and everywhere in between.

Many thanks for what has been the "newsletter of our travel lives," during our 30 years of marriage.

Driving the Autobahn

As a charter subscriber, I read your issues and follow your advice. I've now been to Europe at least 30 times and your car rentals are the best! I always seem to receive an upgrade. Last time, it was a loaded BMW convertible with a stick shift. I felt like a kid again and was not intimidated on the Autobahn.

Hotel Schloss Berg

We have had many pleasant visits to the countries you feature and remember with especial fondness the Hotel Schloss Berg. The ships on the Starnbergersee and the many interesting things within walking distance are very pleasant and a short train trip puts you in the center of München, a great city.

Independence Day

I still have every issue since subscribing in 1991. I have used these back issues, your reservation services, "Travel Essentials," and your website innumerable times for our many European trips in the past 15 years and have always found them accurate and reliable. However, the best part is the confidence you have given us to strike out on our own, doing the things and visiting places that most American travelers miss when traveling in Europe. How about a reunion of all your readers at the Gasthof Fraundorfer? I'll bet they couldn't hold all of us who have been there and seen what true gemütlichkeit is all about.

DICK KREITNER

Checkpoint Charlie

Congratulations on 20 years of inspiring and informative reporting. You are the next best thing to spätzle mit speck. Each month we devour each issue like fresh schlagoobers over warm mohn kuchen. Gemütlichkeit helped us take our son through Checkpoint Charlie on his fifth birthday, provided a rail pass for our teenage daughter when she was a student, directed us to authentic restaurants and beer halls, and pointed us toward comfortable hotels where we could sleep it all off. We were mellow on the yellow roads, ate our way through KaDaWe, sang DoReMi in Mirabell, and got some 'resht' in 'Budapest.' Keep up the good work! Danke!

Hiking the Alps

We began traveling to the German speaking countries in 1985 and have gone at least once a year since then, mostly on hiking trips. We have probably read every word of Gemütlichkeit since your first issue. We have purchased Swiss rail tickets and rented cars through you; and have had delightful stays on your recommendation at Der Bär in Ellmau, Austria, and at Hotel Art Nouveau in Berlin. Your enthusiastic writing about Berlin and Dresden spurred us to go there.

Here are some recommendations for you: Stay half-pension at our all-time Swiss favorites—small, family-run Hotel Chesa Grischuna in Klosters, and Pension Privata in Sils Maria. Near the beautiful mountain village of Ellmau, Austria, we also have found the Stanglwirt, a large family-run hotel and spa which has excellent hiking as well as extensive spa facilities.

Through the years, I have used your recommendations in our family's travels and in helping friends make travel plans. Your hotel recommendations in Salzburg (Trümer Stube) and in Munich (Acanthus) have been favorites ever since we first read about them and we have sent many friends to them too.

We have relied on your car rental expertise for almost all our rentals in Europe—even in Italy, Holland, and England. The one time I thought I could do better by making my own reservations using my husband's Hertz Gold discount, you gave me a better price.

But the one thing I—and a half dozen friends who were traveling with us back in 1992 on a trip from Holland to France and on to Germany and Luxembourg—remember best is your willingness to work with us in getting a VW van delivered in Bruges, Belgium.

As I recall, one of your contacts actually drove the van over to Bruges from Germany, met us at the train station, delivered the van and paperwork, then returned by train to Germany. Incidentally, four of those same friends used Gemütlichkeit again last fall to rent a car in Milan, Italy, and discovered you still get better rental prices than anyone else.

Readers Have Contributed

Not all of Gemütlichkeit's excellent recommendations come from the staff. In your January 1994 issue, Linda and Max Gray of Diablo, CA shared their feelings about the Berg-hotel Zistelalm above Salzburg on top of the Gaisberg. Because of their recommendations we stayed there in late March 1995.

We had two nights of unexpected snow, wonderful meals, and excellent treatment. As I was uncomfortable driving our small rental car on the mountain in what appeared to a South Carolinian to be very deep snow, Herr Hauser drove us into Salzburg and picked us up after our sight-seeing. He also prepared a typical Austrian meal at our request, including the Salzburger Knockerl. All this while we were the only guests eating in the hotel that night.

The couple traveling with us felt that in all of our stops in the three countries, the Zistelalm was the most gemütlich.

Family Tradition

My favorite German gasthaus was referred by a Gemütlichkeit subscriber in the October, 1992 issue. I have been there at least once each year since. The Prossl-brau was formerly a Dominikanerinnen Monastery that included a church and brewery. The Prossl family bought the walled facilities about 170 years ago. Then they added a gasthaus and 15 rooms. The family maintains the church. The rooms are modest but fully equipped. The food is traditional German and the beer (made on the premises) is some of the best in

Some of the Prossl locals have asked me, "How did you ever find this place hidden on top of this hill?" My answer, I'm here because of Gemütlichkeit.

Car Rental Deals

Three significant items come to mind, thanks to Gemütlichkeit:

- We have been going to the Waldhotel Doldenhorn in Kandersteg for over 15 years now, at least once a year, and have watched the Family Maeder grow and build the property from a former tunnel/railroad laborer dorm to a 4-5 star property.

- The Florhof Hotel in Zürich is one of our favorites and here, too, we have been going for over 15 years. This experience has also been an interesting one in transitioning from the former owners/managers to the Family Schiesser several years ago and seeing the current folks expand and upgrade the hotel and its services.

- The many times that we have arranged a car rental through you has always produced the best deals in every respect. In the start, maybe 12-15 years ago, you used a family

Bleu. This year, we confirmed the Cordon Bleu is still fantastic and fills the platter. Barbara remembered us and made our evening complete when she rewarded us with a warm "beer schnapps." As in previous years, the evening was filled with Gemütlichkeit.

Discovering Vienna

I think that my wife and I owe Gemütlichkeit a special vote of thanks for your many great ideas about restaurants, hotels, and things to do in Vienna. Our first trip to this wonderful city was in 2000. It is now our favorite European destination. We followed up in 2001 by taking our daughter and two granddaughters there as well, and went back again this year — the experience gets better every time! We now include Salzburg on our trips and since we love classical music, your suggestions for enjoying the Mozart celebrations were right on target and made for yet another wonderful set of memories.

Finally, I have applied for a Fulbright grant to teach and study at the University of Salzburg — something I would never have dreamed of without the experiences we have had in Austria.

ROGER (AND CARYL) JONES
BROOMALL, PA

Art Nouveau

We have used your suggestions for a variety of occasions (Trier walking tour; a visit to Cesky Krumlov; a walk in the Swiss Engadine), but we both agreed that your best recommendation ever was the Hotel Art Nouveau in Berlin. From the moment we entered the "cage" elevator we just knew we were someplace special. Christine and Gerd Schlenzka have made their hotel a unique space, with its individually-decorated bedrooms, comfortable breakfast room, and colorful artwork and accents everywhere. Christine and Gerd are the epitome of what good hosts should be: friendly and helpful but unobtrusive. Art Nouveau remains one of our best hotel experiences in many years of travel.

Romantik Hotels

Since 1985 we have made annual trips, always flying to Munich, renting a car through Gemütlichkeit and driving to the Salzkammergut area of Austria, where we usually stay at the Feriencub in Grundlsee. We have stayed at 16 or 17 Romantik Hotels over the past 20 years, many of which were recommended by Gemütlichkeit. They are consistently the best.

LITTLE COMPTON, RI

Swiss Fix

One of our very favorite hotels has been Hotel Anker in Markt-heidenfeld in Germany for our 'first night' stay. Over the years it's been interesting to watch the owners' children mature and become more involved in the hotel operation. This year we also stayed at another of your recommended hotels in Spiez — Hotel Bellevue. We had a nice room with a balcony with a great view of the lake.

You can be sure that when we make a trip to Germany and/or Switzerland, your publication is the first one I turn to for travel-related decisions.

JOANNE A. SMITH MELLO

Interlaken and Zermatt

In 1986, my husband and I started our European adventures and traveled Switzerland for a month. We especially loved Interlaken and Zermatt. We could not afford the five-star Victoria-Jungfrau Hotel, so we stayed next door at the Metropole. It was right across from Shuh's Restaurant, where we enjoyed many a delicious meal.
